Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 15 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Much milder. Rain in southeast clearing. Showers for the northwest.

Today:
Rain across the southeast will clear by late morning. Low cloud and fog elsewhere also slowly clearing by midday, then all parts seeing sunny intervals, but with showers in the west, heavy in the northwest. Much milder than recently. Breezy.

Tonight:
Further cloud and rain moving northeast across all parts. Some heavy rain expected over hills of the west. Becoming windy with gales developing in the northwest. Mild and frost free.

Tuesday:
Rain will be slow to clear the southeast. Elsewhere sunshine and showers are expected, these frequent and heavy in the west and northwest. Windy with gales in the northwest. Mild.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Remaining unsettled with bands of rain and showers moving on a brisk south-westerly wind, with brief settled interludes. Coastal gales in the south and northwest at times. Rather mild.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.